

MUI Lecture Series

"When immune cells go haywire in the skin"

Dr. C.P. Tensen

11 December 2019

5:00 pm

CCB building, room M.01.470

6020 Innsbruck

MEDIZINISCHE
UNIVERSITÄT

INNSBRUCK

Kees Tensen (1957) has studied Biology at the Vrije Universiteit Amsterdam (1985-1991), did his PhD in the field of molecular Neurobiology at the Catholic University of Nijmegen (1985-1991) and continued with several post-doc positions (1991-2000) in Utrecht and Amsterdam. During this time he has worked as short-term visiting researcher at Labs in Brighton, UK (1993), Hamburg, Germany (1994) and Puerto de Mazarron, Spain (1995). He got a permanent position in 1999 at the dept of Dermatology, LUMC as senior scientist and is head of the research lab since October 2000. In addition to research, he is involved in teaching (bio)medical students, the organization of the study Biomedical Sciences at the LUMC and chairman of the education advisory board at the University of Applied Sciences, Leiden